Family issues during the pandemic? You don't have to do it alone.

Happy April everyone! It might be the last day of the month, but that should be celebrated because what a long month it was! I am sure that on April 1st (a/k/a April Fools Day) many of us thought we would still be under stay at home rules. But here we are and we made it through April.

Speaking of the last day of April, April 30th is National Honesty Day, so get out there and tell the truth.

As stress is at an all time high due to financial and health concerns. Social isolation in an unhappy marriage can seem unbearable.

Edens Law Group is here to help. Our lawyers are working remotely to attend to our clients needs. We are here to help.

Divorce and COVID-19

It's so hard to know where to begin in discussing the pandemic and the world we are all living in right now. As a Divorce lawyer, these are especially turbulent times. The advice we are all being given- be kind to yourself, take stock in where you are in life, use this time of isolation to reflect what you truly want.

Before we were all asked to stay at home, there were so many distractions, kids, school, sports, work, friends, gym, activities it made it easy to keep oneself occupied to the point of exhaustion daily without contemplating the deeper question of “am I happy?”. We are also as a society confronted with the numbers of daily deaths and the temporariness of life. Now, many couples are at home together.

When added all together, we as divorce lawyers are getting calls after some serious soul searching. There has been a distinctive switch as seen in the questions new clients are asking. While change is never easy, and may be particularly difficult given the lockdown, loss of jobs, etc. it is a good time to ask questions.

The Attorneys at Edens Law Group are here to offer you a free, confidential one hour strategy session by phone or teleconference to help answer the questions that come up during this pandemic. Do not hesitate to call us at 908-879-9499.

Parenting

N.J. Helping essential workers cover child care costs.

New Jersey offers relief to families of our essential workers during the coronavirus pandemic.

Along with opening child care centers for children of essential workers in March. Governor Phil Murphy has also signed an executive order to create an "Emergency Child Care Assistance program".

This order offers state subsidies of $336 to $450 per week to healthcare and other essential workers.

Regardless of income, families who meet the definition of "essential" workers under the executive order can register at childcarenj.gov.
