Happy Holidays from Edens Law Group!

Winter is coming!

Or already here for most of us in Central and Northern New Jersey who received a whole lot of snow this past week. The holidays are also here – Hanukkah has ended, Christmas is coming and of course New Year's Day. It seems safe to venture that most of us are looking anxiously toward 2021 with hopes that it will be better than 2020. 2020 has been rough and has shown us that so much of life is outside of our control.

So let's focus on what is inside of our control. How we treat others – our parents, our children, our siblings, our friends and strangers. Be kind to them. And be kind to yourself. Everyday life is challenging and it's even more so when you're trying to schedule the holidays in the midst of a pandemic with your ex. The best way to address this challenge is to develop a plan with your ex outlining the schedule for each holiday that is celebrated. Discussing holiday plans and schedules in advance is key to prevent misunderstandings and avoid unnecessary anxiety. Planning ahead will also allow the children to be involved in the plans and know exactly where they are going for the holidays. We get it – there is a reason the two of you are divorced. There is also a reason to be kind to each other and communicate – both of you are still family to your children. Make it the best holiday season you can for them.

As stress is at an all time high due to financial and health concerns. Social isolation in an unhappy marriage can seem unbearable.

So in addition to the standard Happy New Year we wish you a new year filled with kindness – both given and received.
