Struggling with divorce and co-parenting this September? We're here to help.

As we all know, September is back to school month. In 2020 it looks a whole lot different than ever before. In many respects chaos reigns. Some schools are having the younger children do remote learning. Other schools flipped it so the younger ones are in person and the older students are learning remotely. Some schools bring the children in one or two days a week, with remote learning the rest of the days. Some schools are completely remote. Some opened and then closed. Everyone is wearing masks.

Just like the adults of the world, each child is diverse and has different needs. Where one child responds well to remote learning and staying mostly or completely at home, others are struggling with the lack of contact with friends, their sports activities and just being out and about everyday.

This is also an extremely trying time for parents also, who are balancing work and having children at home. If you are a divorced parent sharing custody, disagreements regarding how to make a plan for this can run rampant. Which parent can work remotely and which parent can't? Of course, even if you are working remotely, you are in fact working and cannot be monitoring your child's school work at the same time. Should you hire a tutor to help the children with their schoolwork and if so is one tutor shared between two houses or two different tutors- one for each parent's home. Is it even safe in the time of Covid-19 to have a tutor into your home?

As stress is at an all time high due to financial and health concerns. Social isolation in an unhappy marriage can seem unbearable.

At Edens Law Group we can help you work through all these issues, and anything else that might arise. We are open and available. Call us at 908 879 9499.

Don't Forget About Fall Fun!

Importantly, do not forget the wonders of autumn. Fresh apples, apple cider and donuts are at most farm markets. Walking outside in the cooler weather is a pleasure for the whole family. Take the time to enjoy!

September 18th was Rosh Hashanah and September 27th Yom Kippur. Happy New Year to all our Jewish friends and acquaintances.

September 28th is both National Son's Day and National Good Neighbor's Day, both excellent reasons to celebrate.

The entire month of September also has two very important meanings: It is National Courtesy Month and National Suicide Prevention Month. Both are worthy of your time and consideration.

The ongoing pandemic has made this back-to-school season even more stressful for parents than usual. If you're having trouble navigating how to co-parent effectively during the back-to-school season, check out this article for some helpful tips.
